This was a stocking stuffer gift for our 7 yr old that turned out to more than worth it's cost. We played this round robin style with a group of 11 after dinner with each person (young as 5 and old as 73) supplying a word and the result was hysterical. Through the game my kids have learned parts of speech (what an adverb, adjective, noun) all while having fun ..even the grownups got a refresher. This brought young and old together after dinner, has a Star Wars theme and teaches you a little bit as well ...all for a few dollars.

I purchased 2 of the Mad Libs books before our last family vacation as a way to entertain my kids and keep them busy while waiting to get to the next rest stop or for dinner to arrive at our table. (It couldn't hurt to reinforce a little grammar as well.) Since my family loves the Star Wars movies, this seemed like the obvious choice. Many of the puzzles tell a "story" from a different character's point of view and there's a little something from each movie. There were a few puzzles that mostly required nouns and adjectives, making it good for younger children. A couple of puzzles ask for numbers or funny words, so even a preschooler could play. My boys far preferred Mad Libs to Angry Birds and our family really enjoyed playing and laughing together. I'm sure the other diners at Denny's wondered what was so funny. Great family fun.

The Force is strong with these Mad Libs This is just a fantastic edition of Mad Libs. For the most part, it's basically just the chronological story of Star Wars from The Phantom Menace through Return of the Jedi. (Force Awakens material is not included) The only difference from these stories you know by heart is all the blank lines that you can fill with various nouns / adjectives / verbs to make Star Wars hilarious. I mean who doesn't want to talk about the time Han Solo flew the Millennium Duck above the Happy Star and saved Luke from being attacked by Darth Booger's TIE Fighter? That's just classic literature! I got this to play with a 5 year old who loves Star Wars. But I absolutely enjoy it every bit as much as she does. The format of the book is exactly like every other Mad Lib you've ever seen in your life. The opposite page of each Mad Lib lets you list the nouns and verbs and such without reading the story so you can play it alone. I still remember these being banned by my elementary school because the principal thought they were going to cause all of us impressionable 9 year olds to turn to a life of crime or something. Man, that guy was dumb.

I got these for a road trip to give us something fun to do that would make us laugh. These work perfectly for that (and you can't beat the price). I have also purchased these for gifts for cousins and they have really liked them too.

We got this for our 7-year-old. We just got into Mad Libs lately and thought he'd enjoy this edition for his birthday. We were right. I love that it helps with learning the parts of speech and expanding his vocabulary. Our favorite plural noun to enter is "burping cats." It makes us all giggle.

I've taken to carrying Mad Libs around for when I may need to kill some time. This is a particularly entertaining set. I would recommend it for Star Wars fans as it is funny to picture the normal characters suddenly doing strange things due to inserted words.

With the new episode of Star Wars hitting the screens this Christmas, the guys in my family were going Star Wars crazy. That is why this was a stocking stuffer hit in my house. A fun way for everyone to get so into the movie before they went to watch it.. There were hours of laughs and fun.

The one thing that we did to prolong our fun was to make sure that we did not fill the blanks in the book itself. A great collector item for even the smallest Star Wars fan.

Well, not as good as I had remembered. If everyone doesn't agree to give words that have to do with the given storylines, then it very often makes no sense. In fact, it's better to have some idea what the story is actually about, so your answers can either be straight --supposedly -- or aim for what will be hopefully amusing, or laugh out loud if lucky ^, And it's always a great way to learn English !
