My grand kids love animals so these were a lot of fun to do with them as, once they understood the concept, they got very creative in their answers. The game is also good at helping them learn and reinforce the various parts of speech.

As a mom and a school counselor I look for kid activities with meaning....but are fun and will hold the interest of my kids. These will do this. Also great for road trips or plane rides as well. Good family fun!

My grandson loves these stories he makes himself. He is home-schooled and his Mom uses these books to get him to practice writing. Often, he is unfamiliar with how a word is written, so the follow-up story surprises and delights him. Great learning tool, and a whole lot of fun for both teacher and the student.

Mad Libs are a useful educational tool and this book was stimulating and engaging, but perhaps not challenging enough. Our 7 year-old started to lose interest as she churned through each page and she remarked it wasn't all that challenging. Still, I am pleased to see her engaged and motivated to keep working through something that's more stimulating than passive reading.

My 3 year old enjoys doing these with us. We read off the suggested words for her to pick from and then laughs and laughs when we read the completed story. After asking us to repeat it 3-5 times, she is able to tell it back to us, sometimes changing the silly words with others, extending the fun of each story.

My daughter loves Mad Libs, they're very cute and fun. Would recommend. Love that kids actually have to think of verbs, adjectives, etc.. really makes them think plus they find it fun!

Bought for my 9 year old son. He has a great time with it. Especially when he is with friends and they are getting really silly.

These are adorable and made a perfect stocking stuffer for a 7 yo reluctant writer. Once he had these, he was filling them in for days. Great way to get the kid to want to write and spell stuff.
